Molloy College Sponsors Long Island ESOL Conference

The Long Island ESOL Institute at Molloy College and the Long Island Regional Adult Education Network will be sponsoring the Long Island ESOL Conference 2005 on Saturday, April 30, 2005. This year's conference titled, Language Learners: The Changing Face of Long Island is being held in cooperation with the Long Island Educational Opportunity Center at Farmingdale State University of New York, Nassau Community College, and Queensborough Community College.

The conference will be held in Kellenberg Hall on the Molloy College campus. Registration begins at 8:00 am and the conference will conclude at approximately 1:30 pm. Selected workshops include:

- "H2O Meets ESL" — ESL in secondary science classes
- "Parent Programs on a Budget"
- "One Size Does Not Fit All: Creating the Differentiated Classroom"
- "Co-teaching English Learners in the K-3 Classroom"
- "Using Student Created Books to Teach Reading, Writing and a Whole Lot More"
- "We All Laugh in the Same Language: ESOL, Music, and Multiple Intelligences"
- "Thematic Units in ESL"

"Since its inception in 2002, the Long Island ESOL Institute at Molloy College has offered several conferences and workshops on topics relating to the diverse immigrant population of Long Island," stated Dr. Andrea Honigsfeld, Ed.D., Coordinator, MS TESOL Programs, Graduate Education, Molloy College. "We hope to continue this tradition and reach out to even more educators, administrators, and all interested members of the Long Island Community this year. Come and share a day of insightful and energizing workshops with us."

On-site registration for the conference is $40.00. For more information, contact Sr. Alexandria Wolochuk at 516-678-5000 ext. 6426, Dr. Maureen Walsh at mwalsh@molloy.edu, or Dr. Andrea Honigsfeld at ahonigsfeld@molloy.edu.
