Molloy College Nursing Department Receives Grant From Roslyn Savings Foundation

The Department of Nursing at Molloy College was recently awarded a grant from the Roslyn Savings Foundation that will fund an innovative program to educate and attract men and women from diverse backgrounds to the field of nursing.

“As a result of the national nursing shortage, there continues to be an increasing need to recruit both men and women to the profession, stated Bernadette Curry, Chairperson, Department of Nursing, Molloy College. “This generous grant from the Roslyn Foundation will allow us to educate the community about contemporary nursing, address underrepresented groups in the profession, and encourage individuals to explore the discipline.”

The grant will fund a multi-faceted approach involving alumni, students, college professionals and others associated with the profession in an outreach program.

One aspect of the approach includes the taping of a television program to be aired as part of “Molloy College Presents” through Telecare, the television station for the Diocese of Rockville Centre. This dedicated program will feature a roundtable discussion with leaders in the field of nursing discussing the versatility of nursing roles and the value of a baccalaureate or advanced degree in current and future health care.

“Molloy College is thankful to the Roslyn Foundation for this grant which will enable us to implement a comprehensive and dynamic program designed to create awareness about the many opportunities available in the discipline of nursing,” stated Drew Bogner, Ph.D., President, Molloy College.
