Molloy College will host a discussion entitled 'Sacred Spaces: Architecture of Religious Edifices from Around the World that Represents Vision and Mission.'

Richard Vosko, Ph.D., A.A., Architect, Designer and Consultant for religious environments, will explore the search for the sacred in architectural forms as they have developed in various traditions and religions by means of illustrations of edifices from around the world.

The whirlwind journey will begin when humans worshiped in the desert and on the mountain tops and continue through today. Trends in religious architecture will be identified pointing out the common ground that exists in diverse places on earth.

The event is scheduled for April 13, 2008, at 3 p.m., Hays Theatre, Wilbur Arts Center, Molloy College. For further information please contact Marion Lowenthal, Special Programs, Molloy College, 516.678.5000 ext. 6880.
