Holidays as Celebrated by Our Neighbors

Molloy College's Institute for Interfaith Dialogue, will present "Holidays as Celebrated by Our Neighbors." The event will take place on Sunday, December 6, 2009 at 3:00 p.m., in the Hays Theatre, Wilbur Arts Center, on the Molloy College campus. This program is free and open to the public.

Our holy traditions continue to bring meaning to the ways in which we express our shared humanity. How we celebrate life's special events, recognize a new season, praise a deity, honor family members, remember an important moment in history, or commemorate sad or joyous occasions in much the same way. You will be amazed to discover how similar we really are.

Members of the following religions will participate in the program: Hindus, Bahais, Native Americans Spirituals, Brahma Kumaris, Sikhs, Jews of various traditions, Muslims and others.

For more information please call Marion Lowenthal, Director, Special Programs, 516.678.5000 ext. 6880 or email at mloenthal@molloy.edu.
